Should Work Both Ways

The OPA is asking every American housewife to sign a pledge, promising she will not pay more than top legal prices and will accept no rationed goods without giving up ration stamps. That's a good idea and a great majority of American housewives will undoubtedly go along, but why not go a little farther? Why not ask every OPA official to take a pledge that he will get busy and enforce the law against profiteering and that he will ruthlessly crack down on those who are conducting black markets? Officials of the OPA are paid to do their jobs. The American housewife is just a willing volunteer. If OPA officials will do what they are paid to do, it will be much easier for the American housewife to carry out her part of the contract.

Flying Priest Hurt When Plane Makes Nose Dive

The Rev. Stanley Lemanowski, 27 years old, a Catholic priest of 2311 Southport Ave. Chicago, was quite seriously hurt when the student plane he was flying crashed in a field on the Arthur Brandt farm at 135th street and 88th avenue, Orland township, late Tuesday afternoon. It is presumed he turned the plane too short, causing it to make a sudden nose dive. It is understood the plane only dropped 25 feet. Mr. Brandt and his hired man saw the accident and upon reaching the plane found the priest was still in the seat. He had suffered possible ankle fracture and bruises and cuts on the head and face and was bleeding quite badly. He was placed in an automobile and brought to the office of Dr. Henke in Orland Park and after first aid was administered to him, he was taken to St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet. In order to determine the exact nature of his injuries x-rays were to be taken.

Linotype Used As A Bee Hive

Many sweet things are set on a linotype but when bees take to running honey into the typesetting machine it is one for Ripley, believe it or not. Recently a brownish, sticky substance was noticed in the metal pot of the linotype in the News-Bulletin office. It was a puzzle what it could be. Wednesday morning a big brown bubble was again noticed in the metal pot and in addition the exhaust pipe carrying off the fumes and heat from the metal pot was clogged as also were the vent holes in the mouth-piece.

The exhaust pipe was disconnected and a mass of melted honey was found in the pipe, but no bees were to be seen. Just why the bees would choose the hot pipe for a bee hive still remains a mystery.

Washington, D. C. ASSIGNMENT IN SICILY

Unsung U. S. heroes who contributed heavily to Mussolini's downfall were Italian-American boys smuggled into Sicily several weeks before U. S. troops landed.

How they got ashore must remain a military secret. But the fact that they got there is now recognized as a part of military operations, just as the advance landing of Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark in North Africa, carrying bags of U. S. gold.

These Italian-Americans were especially trained in the dangerous, delicate job of winning over military garrisons in advance of a landing force. In Sicily they had the advantage of speaking the language and being able to visit the homes of their relatives, few of whom loved Mussolini. From there they were able to work around to various military leaders.

It has long been known that Italian military leaders were of two types. One is the professional soldier like Field Marshal Badoglio, who was in the army before Mussolini's time and has no love for the Fascists. Also he has no love for the Nazis, and so was not too difficult to win over to the Allied side.

Other type of Italian military leaders is the Fascist Blackshirt, who rose through favors from Il Duce, but who usually is susceptible to coin of the realm. Presumably U. S. advance scouts were supplied with what General Clark took with him in advance into North Africa.

At any rate, expert advance work by patriotic Italian-Americans, plus the popularity of the United States in Sicily, contributed to one of the most bloodless landing expeditions in history.

Also the psychological shock of the headlong U. S. rush through Sicily was what toppled Mussolini off his thorny throne.

GEN. GIRAUD'S WATERLOO

General Giraud was shown all the sights of Washington during his stay here, including the war department's massive Pentagon building, rated as the largest office building in the world.

After the French commander had been led through the labyrinth of Pentagon corridors to General Staff headquarters, and later out into the sunlight, he was asked what he thought of the place.

"Well," remarked General Giraud, "I've escaped from two German prisons, but I could never get out of this building."

UNDER TWO FLAGS

The chickens hatched when American ships were put under the Panamanian flag to avoid neutrality laws are now coming home to roost.

As a result, the U. S. government now employs 16,000 seamen whom it pays in hard cash every month, but over whom it has no disciplinary control whatsoever. The seamen are working under the Panamanian flag, though actually they are American citizens. So when they get into brawls in American ports, they must answer to the Panamanian consul, though they are American citizens and draw American pay.

Certain state department officials are urging that the problem be solved by transferring the ships back to U. S. registry.

Note: At present, when one of these ships clears a U. S. port it must pay a $20 fee to the consul of Panama, in spite of the fact that the ship belongs to the U.S.A.

AXIS DISTORTIONS

The Axis radio is trying to scare up a war in South America. The Bolivian army, with Peru's support, according to the Axis, is about to launch an attack on Chile to gain a port on the Pacific.

Here is the only grain of truth behind this propaganda: When Bolivian President Penaranda returned to La Paz from his visit to the United States, he stated publicly that Bolivian aspirations for a seaport had never been abandoned, that when the opportune time arose Bolivia would assert that claim.

Truth is, however, that Penaranda had no such militant motive in mind. Furthermore, moderate elements in Chile assert they would be perfectly willing to discuss the sale of the port of Arica to Bolivia.

If the Chilean moderates actually bring about negotiation for the sale of Arica, they will set a new high in good neighbor relations. It has not been long since the territorial ambitions of South American countries—as in the case of Peru vs. Ecuador and Bolivia vs. Paraguay—have been settled by a resort to arms.

CAPITAL CHAFF

When Augusto Rosso, former Italian ambassador in Washington, was transferred from Russia to be Italian ambassador to Turkey, the Nazis stopped his appointment. They said he was too pro-American. Rosso has an American wife, the former Mrs. Francis Bunker of Denver.

A total of 101 Nipponese planes attempting to break up the landing were shot down.

Allied Skirted Soldiers Meet

Uniformed women of America and Britain meet on an English road and like their male contemporaries on other battlefronts, they get along as well as old chums. These WACS were among the first contingent of American women to arrive in England. They were strolling and the English WRENS were bicycling when the meeting occurred.

'Little Italy' Rejoices at Benito's Fall

A picture of President Roosevelt hangs on the balcony railing. Italians throughout the country generally hailed Italy's change of government.

'Too Big'

The army rejected Mike Naymick, pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, with the explanation that he is "too big." Mike towers to a height of 6 feet 8 inches and says the air up there is just about the same as it is nearer the ground.

GOD PROVIDES FOR HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 16:11-18; 17:3-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—Give us this day our daily bread.—Matthew 6:11.

Only God can provide the necessities of life. Rationing has taught us that lesson anew if we have been at all thoughtful about it. The plan is one of sharing. Sharing what? The food and other provisions which come to us from God's hand. Unless our crops are good there will be less to share. Only God can help us.

This was the lesson Israel learned in the wilderness. To reach the goal to which God was leading them they must pass through the wilderness. Not only were there many weary miles to travel, but there were privations to be borne. Life is like that.

Now they cried for food. Note how elemental are man's needs in the final analysis—bread and water. The very things we take almost for granted as we concern ourselves with life's weighty interests and profound problems become, if lacking, the only things that have any real meaning. And who is it that can provide them? No one but God Himself.

I. Bread from Heaven (Exod. 16:11-18).

Israel's longing for meat was met by the miraculous coming of quantities of quail (v. 13). But that was not the food to sustain them day after day. For this they needed bread, and it came from heaven, every day until they entered the promised land (Josh. 5:12).

Observe four things about the manna.

First, it was a divine provision. There are responsibilities in life which we may bear—and must bear—but in the ultimate meeting of our real needs we must look to God.

Secondly, it was a daily provision. What forehanded folk many of us are, and no doubt rightly so, for God puts no premium on improvidence. But once again we must recognize, as did Israel in receiving the daily manna in the wilderness, that ours is indeed a moment by moment existence.

We plan bravely for the next decade or the next generation, but as a matter of fact it can only come to pass "if the Lord will" (read James 5:13-17).

Next, it was a limited provision—enough for the day and no more, except for a double portion on the sixth day, and none at all on the Sabbath. These provisions were made clear to Israel, and yet there were those who attempted to lay up for the morrow, and some even went out to seek manna on the Sabbath day.

We marvel at their stubborn obstinacy, but are we not often just like them. Some there are who are always expecting that the laws of both God and man should be set aside for them, but they come to grief.

Finally, it called for diligence and action on their part. They had to be out early each day (except the Sabbath) to gather it. God's mercies are for those who are willing to obey Him. He gives to those who receive by active faith.

II. Water from the Rock (Exod. 17:3-6).

"And the people thirsted"—for the daily manna was not enough, they must have water. Needy, yes, constantly needy are God's children.

"Every life knows the bite of necessity . . . every soul cries out in pain because there is wanting some completing favor, some culminating and all-containing benediction. Here it is bread; there it is water; but everywhere a famine . . . in many a case a famine of soul, a spiritual destitution, a consciousness of a void which time cannot satisfy or space content."

God always provides. There is a rock in the wilderness. But what pleasure does a murmuring people find in a rock when they famish for water? It is God's delightful custom to meet our needs in unexpected ways and by means which we do not understand. Even our physical necessities come from unthought of sources.

III. Christ, the Bread and Water of Life.

Our lesson does not give the New Testament application of Israel's experiences, but let us not miss that blessed spiritual truth.

In John 6:31-33, Christ is declared to be the true bread from heaven, of which the manna was but a type.

Paul speaks in I Corinthians 10:14 of this incident in the history of Israel, saying that they "did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ" (see also John 4:14).

Hungry and thirsty soul, you who are still unsatisfied after tasting all that life apart from Christ has to offer, will you not, just now, take Him?

THERE is no reason that you should do without smart looking upholstered chairs while you are awaiting the day that you will have the living room furniture that you have always dreamed about. Scraps of lumber and plywood or even old packing boxes may be used to make simple chair frames and there are no priorities on cotton padding and sturdy cotton covering materials.

A simple frame for a chair of this type is shown here. It is padded with cotton batting basted to pieces of unbleached muslin cut to fit the back and well over the sides of the seat. A separate cushion filled with cotton, down or feathers is then made for the seat. Either plain or figured material with contrasting seam welting may be used for covering.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared detailed dimensions and directions for making this chair frame. Pattern also gives step-by-step directions for covering the frame after it has been padded. Ask for Pattern 250 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "too" mare named Flicka. His choice merely adds to his father's anger, which is already aroused by the fact that Ken has failed his school work and has shown no sense of responsibility. Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, but even Captain McLaughlin has to admit that she may not be loco after all. While Ken is with Flicka in the pasture he hears cries of pain and finds a neighbor's cow caught in a wire fence. He hurries back to the house to get his wire cutters.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIII

Ken could hear the sound of the transcontinental traffic. A horn tooting, a car changing gears. The light changed. The shadows fell lengthwise on the grass . . . he had the feeling of going off into a day-dream and his eyes wandered . . . but he pulled himself back. Flicka . . . and the cow . . . he was caught into the mesh of things . . . he couldn't leave them. Way off on the road there was a little black speck—Gus! plodding along, his arms swinging from his wide, bowed shoulders, walking as if his shoes hurt him.

Ken leaped off his rock and shot down the road to meet him. He couldn't stand the lonely waiting another minute.

Ken wanted Gus to examine Flicka immediately, but nothing could deter the Swede from getting back to the bunk house and extricating himself from his city clothes without a moment's delay.

As they walked up the road together Ken told of his day—the terrible things that had happened, Flicka down and hurt somehow, and Crosby's cow with her udder torn to pieces, and how he thought at first the wildcat had attacked her. As he talked he kept looking up at the face of the big foreman. Gus' pale blue eyes, with pupils as small as pin points, were always full of light.

Ken got supper in the bunk house, and when Gus returned, they ate it together up there; cold beefsteak, boiled potatoes, apple sauce with thick yellow cream.

Gus washed the dishes and Ken wiped them and put them away. Then Gus took out his pipe and lit it, put his old, torn felt hat on his head, and they walked down through the pasture to see Flicka.

Ken carried a can of oats with him, and, halfway down the path, began to call the filly's name and to whistle to her.

Suddenly he clutched Gus' arm and stopped walking. He called again—there was an answering nicker!

"Oh, Gus—she's calling to me!" "Yee whiz!" said the Swede, his lips turning up in a smile, "she sure is, Kenzie."

Ken ran ahead, loping down the path and calling, "Flicka—Flicka—Flicka—" and an eager whinny came again from the little mare.

When Gus reached the nursery, the filly was sitting up, eating the oats which Ken had poured into her feed box.

"Dot's funny ting," said the man slowly, standing over her. "She's got good appetite. Don't seem sick or hurt."

He sat down on the bank, comfortable again, and glad to be home, and drew peace into his soul with long quiet puffs of his pipe.

"What do you think it is, Gus?" asked Ken anxiously. "Should we try to make her stand up?"

Gus shook his head. "Better wait till your fadder come home. It might be her back, but sittin' up like dot—eatin' her oats—I don't know."

Ken brought a bucket of water and Flicka put her nose in and drank.

"Ay tink dot smart little filly," said the Swede.

The family did not get home until after ten. Gus had gone to bed long since, but Ken was waiting for the car on the hill behind the house—he and the two dogs watching the empty road. The sky was crowded with stars, and the Milky Way so brilliant that it shed a soft light over woods and fields and stream.

When Ken saw the headlights of the car, a happy glow went through him. Chaps began to bark, and both dogs got up and moved around restlessly, wagging their tails and nipping at each other.

The car roared up the hill, circled around, came to a stop, and Ken jumped on the running board and stuck his head in the front window.

His mother's face was right there, smiling at him from under her green turban, and everyone spoke at once. She said, "Hello, darling, here we are—were you lonesome?" while Howard yelled from the back seat, "Gee, you missed it! You oughta seen the wild horse race—three Indians fell off." And his father was looking over the seat, handing Tim the keys of the car, and telling him to open up the back and unload the sacks of potatoes and onions.

"Howard, you help Tim unload and put away the provisions," he added; then turned to Ken. "Ken I want to see you."

"Dad, Flicka—" It was the third time Ken had said it.

"Come on." His father's hand fell on his shoulder and pushed him down around the end of the house.

"Dad, Flicka—"

"Ken, I'm proud of you." They were standing on the terrace, and Ken, looking up with his mouth open in surprise, saw his father's face, tired, but showing his big white teeth in a smile of pride.

Ken stared.

"Crosby's cow," said McLaughlin. "We stopped at Tie Siding on the way home for the mail. Crosby was there getting his mail. He told me how you had cut his cow loose from the wire when her udder was caught, and that Gus rode over and told him."

Ken was getting ready to say, "Flicka," again, when his father lifted one of the boy's hands and held the small, helpless, softness in his own hard fist. "I used to think these hands of yours would never be good for anything. They had as much strength to them as wet spaghetti; but today they manipulated a pair of wire cutters on a cow that was crazy with pain. You never did anything like that before in your life. What made you do it?"

Ken, wondering himself, said, "Well, she bellered so, you could hear something was the matter—I thought it might be the wildcat after her; and I remembered you said it was all mine; and I thought, if it had been Flicka—"

Gus washed the dishes and Ken wiped them.

"Flicka, eh?" McLaughlin turned away and walked toward the door, still holding Ken's hand in his. "Well, now what was it you were going to tell me about Flicka?"

Ken rapidly poured out the tale of Flicka's injury and helplessness, and McLaughlin listened gravely.

"How do you know she can't get up?" he asked.

"Because she tries. She gets her head up and makes a sort of scramble, and then falls back again. She acts like she's hurt her back," he added, his eyes devouring his father's face.

"How's she lying?" asked McLaughlin.

"Right on her side, in her place down there," said Ken, and added, "Gus and I didn't try to move her or get her up, we thought you'd know how to do it."

"And I suppose she can't eat," said McLaughlin wearily.

"Oh, yes, she ate her oats."

"How?"

"I put the box right by her nose, and she lifted her head up and ate them."

"All of them?"

"Yes. Cleaned them all up. And then I gave her a bucket of water and she drank some."

"Can't be very sick then. I'll wait till morning, Ken."

"Oh, Dad, please—"

"Shut up!" roared McLaughlin, going toward the door. "Can't a man ever have any peace? Time you were in bed too—come on."

After breakfast next morning Rob went down to the nursery to see Flicka. Nell left her dishes and went too, with the cat on her shoulder. Howard and Ken were already there.

Flicka had eaten her breakfast oats and licked the box clean. She lifted her head with ease, she whinnied now and then, but she would not get up.

Rob's observations were always made rapidly. He said, "Stand back, all of you—I'm going to roll her over to the other side."

The filly immediately made a scramble, using her two forelegs and the left hind leg to push with, and got up. Everyone laughed.

Flicka stood calmly in the center of the group, and when Ken went to her head and put his hands on either side of her face, she remained quiet.

"Nothing wrong with her back," said McLaughlin. "It's her leg. That right hind leg. She couldn't use it to push with, and, lying on the left side, she couldn't get up without it."

"But she's been using it, Dad," said Ken anxiously.

"Yes. It was all healed up, but look at it now. It's swollen. That means infection, and it hurts her worse than it did at first. Look, she's not bearing any weight on it."

Ken's face was distraught when he noticed the swelling above the joint. Everyone knew that the worst danger of wire cuts was the infection that so often followed. "What do you do for an infection, when it's a horse?" he faltered.

Nell answered cheerfully, "Just what you'd do if it was a person. Wet dressings; poultices, so that it will open and drain."

Flicka showed no sign of fear or nervousness. When Ken petted her and smoothed her neck, she looked at him with trust and gratitude.

"Now that she'll let us get close to her," continued Nell, automatically stroking her cat, "there won't be any trouble about it."

"Why does she let us, Dad?" asked Ken.

"Well," said McLaughlin grimly, "she's only got three legs—she can't run away, can she?"

He walked off, Howard after him. Ken knew that his father couldn't bear to look at a sick animal. But his mother said, "We'll get that cleared up in no time, Kenzie. I'll help you."

A load fell from Kenzie's shoulders. At least Flicka wasn't going to die. At least her back was not broken. He went back to the house with his mother, and she boiled some meal and put it in a linen bag, and mixed a disinfectant wash and put it in a bucket for Ken to carry down.

When Flicka saw them coming, though Ken carried a bucket and Nell a basin with the poultices and bandages—enough to frighten even a well-broken horse—she showed no fear.

"She has got sense, hasn't she, Mother?" muttered Ken, as they prepared the poultice. "She knows we're helping her, doesn't she?"

"Looks like it," said Nell, preoccupied with the bandages. "Now you stand at her head, Ken—she's more used to you—while I do this—"

Flicka raised her leg off the ground while Nell bathed it and bandaged on the poultice. It made a comical-looking white knob above the hock.

Ken's nights were no longer dreamless. There was no peace for the boy. By day his new responsibility, his passionate hope, his meticulous care of Flicka; and by night a procession of dream-adventures, sometimes terrible ones. Often his mutterings and cries brought his mother or father to his bedside. Something was ever—and ferociously—at his heels.

It was an agony; and his appearance changed in a way that was noticeable. Both boys usually grew taller during the summer vacations, and put on weight too, but Ken had gained no weight this summer, only height; and his face was strained and anxious.

But through the agony ran a thread of something so exciting that he was strung like a taut bow. There was the first, thrilling whiff of real achievement. It was not only his hands that had changed. All the listlessness of the day-dreamer, the sliding away from reality, had gone. He looked, stood, moved, eagerly and with determination. He was in love. He was in the very core of life, and he wrestled with it as Jacob wrestled with the angel.

The achievement was Flicka and the winning of her friendship. He had a horse now. He had her in the same intimate sense that Howard had Highbow. He couldn't ride her yet, but she was his because she had given herself to him.

While she stood eating her oats, his hands smoothed the satin-soft skin under her mane. It had a nap as deep as plush. He played with her long, cream-colored tresses; arranged her forelock neatly between her eyes. She was a bit dish-faced, like an Arab, with eyes set far apart. Ken kept a curry-comb and brush in the crotch of the cottonwood tree, and lightly groomed and brushed her. Flicka enjoyed this. As he moved about her, first on one side, then the other, kneeling down to brush her legs and polish her small hoofs which had the color and sheen of cream-colored marble, she turned her head to him, and always, if she could rest her muzzle on him. Ken grew used to the feel of the warm, moist lips against his shoulder or back, and his mother complained of all the polo shirts he dirtied tending to Flicka.

He spoiled her. Soon she would not step to the stream to drink but he must hold a bucket for her. And she would drink, then lift her dripping muzzle, rest it on his shoulder, her golden eyes dreaming off into the distance, then daintily dip her mouth and drink again.

'FREEDOM TO WORK' BIRTH OF AN IDEA

WHAT AMERICA is fighting for is presumed to be enunciated in the Atlantic Charter and expressed in President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms. The day following the first announcement of the four freedoms, W. O. Hart, then the editor of the Orange (Calif.) Daily News, wrote and printed an editorial in which he insisted that to the four should be added a fifth, the freedom to work.

The Orange Daily News is a small rural newspaper. It does not have a wide circulation. Comparatively few editors of other newspapers see it. The editor of a newspaper trade publication, Editor & Publisher, did see that editorial and reprinted it with credit to the Orange Daily News. That reprinting brought the editorial to the attention of thousands of newspaper editors in all sections of the United States. Hundreds of them reprinted it, some with credit to the News and some without. That little editorial in a rural newspaper had started an American crusade.

W. O. Hart's pen is stilled now. He died in an airplane crash last December, but the idea he so promptly inaugurated goes marching on. Newspapers in all sections, periodicals of national circulation, radio commentators, are demanding for the American people a continuance of the opportunity to work and to achieve. It is echoed from the platform and the pulpit. It is an insistence that the efforts of that coterie of theoretical bureaucrats, whose purpose is to change our American system, be frustrated. The American people want, and will have, the opportunity to exercise their individual initiative, the opportunity to display their ability to get ahead. They demand a continuance of the American free enterprise system as the foundation on which is built the American way of life.

It is a crusade started by an editorial in a rural newspaper. It was but a pebble dropped into the ocean of American sentiment, but it has spread and has become a mighty wave that will sweep into oblivion those theoretical bureaucrats whose purpose was to make America over, to destroy our system of free enterprise, the foundation of our way of life.

RURAL AMERICA AND CONGRESS

UNITED STATES senators and representatives are at home, visiting with the home folks, those people who sent them to Washington to enact legislation for the nation. Just about 50 per cent of the representatives are from rural districts. They are now talking with people of the towns and farms for they want to know if the home folks approve or disapprove of ceilings on farm products, of subsidies to processors, of bonuses, rationing, of the general food policy. They want to know if their constituents prefer regulation by executive decree or by laws enacted by congress. They will inquire into the attitude of the people on the question of the government in business and the reign of the bureaucrats. These and many other subjects will be discussed, and the answers the representatives receive will be reflected in their actions in congress when it again assembles the middle of September.

There is one thing the lawmakers will find among the rural people. That is a definite determination to fight the war to a conclusive, "unconditional surrender" end, regardless of what sacrifice they may be called upon to make.

ECONOMIC PLANNERS

OUR WASHINGTON PLANNERS attempt to tell us that our free enterprise system has reached the end of its virility. They prophesy dire consequences unless the government takes over the direction of production and distribution. They may be—and I believe they are—mistaken, as was another economist of an earlier day. He was Robert Thomas Malthus, a Cambridge university economist of 1880. He alarmed people of England by his insistence that the British Isles could not support any greater population than they had. English "planners" proposed methods of regulating the birth rate in order that the population might not outgrow the number of jobs. A century later the British Isles had five times the population of 1880, living on a much higher standard. That is proof that economists can be wrong, and our economic planners may be of that kind. I think they are.

GENERAL MacARTHUR is not advancing on Japan island by island, but group by group of islands. Even that means a long road to Tokyo.

WHILE A CONSIDERABLE number of college professors of varying shades of pink are striving to "make America over" to fit their ideas of what it should be, Dr. George S. Benson of Harding college at Searcy, Ark., is doing a man-size job in an effort to keep America as a land of freedom and opportunity.

Flemish Word for Car Is Two Good Mouthfuls

Just about the longest word in the world is "snelpaardelooszoondeerspoorwegpetrolrijtuig," and is a Flemish word meaning automobile.

The etymology is "snel," rapid; "paardeloos," horseless; "zoondeerspoorweg," without rails; "petrolrijtuig," driven by petrol.

What a contrast this word is to our own abbreviation "car"! As a description the word is quite good—but thank goodness, we speak English!

The gaily enameled unit insignia you see on a soldier's lapels and overseas cap are reproductions of his regimental shield displayed in the center of the eagle on his regimental flag. It's a part of U. S. Army tradition. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) It's a gift from the folks back home, that always rates cheers. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The basis of modern rubber usage is vulcanization, a word that is derived from Vulcan, the Greek God of Fire.

The cryptostegia vine yields about 17 drops of rubber latex a day, a seven-year-old Hevea tree three to six pounds of rubber a year. Properly treated Hevea trees, when 10 years old, can give from 1000 to 1500 pounds of rubber per acre per year. About eleven pounds of rubber are used in making a small automobile tire.

Lay rubber articles flat when storing, allowing them to assume their natural position. Rubber loses its life when under a permanent strain.

The long anticipated pins given to volunteer workers in the Production Unit of the Red Cross arrived last week. These pins were earned by eight women of the Tinley Park Unit upon the completion of 144 hours of work. The women are: Mrs.
Rensink, Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. W. W.
Kester, Mrs. Koester, Mrs. A. L.
Koehler, Mrs. Wm. Riek, Mrs. Van Brussel and Mrs. Ebenbach. A few more will have received their pins for surgical dressings before our year is completed.

Surgical dressings attract more volunteers than any other service rendered by the Red Cross, probably because of its strong humanitarian appeal. Only few women have time to administer directly to sick and wounded soldiers but the privilege of making dressings is given to all.

Our surgical dressing unit is meeting every Tuesday from 10:00 a.m.
to 3:30 p. m. in the school building.
Don't wait to be asked, come out.
We are always welcome.

Mrs. Ebenbach, unit chairman

SERVICEMEN'S NEWS

New Guinea

June 16, 1943

Dear Citizens Committee:

How is all the folks in Tinley? I'm fine and doing the best I can in the jungles of New Guinea. I haven't been getting the Tinley Park Times for the last two months and sure miss it. The mail service is very poor down here and I haven't been getting much mail. We got the Japs where we want them and it won't be long before we'll get the yellow boys out of New Guinea. Well I hope I will see you all in Tinley soon.

Your Friend,
Pfc. Samuel Greco

Dear Friends:

I was very Glad to get your package and I want you to know you made me very happy to get it. Well here I am out here in the desert and it is ever hot here. It gets as hot as 150 in the shade out here. And all that you see is sand, rattle snakes ants and flies. Gosh you can have the whole state of California I don't want any of it. I like good old Tin-ley Park for mine. I have been around a lot traveling and the more I see of the others I am happier I live in Ill. Well there is nothing much more to write about only we're working hard and trying to be good soldiers. I will close now and regards to all.

I remain yours,
Sgt. N. J. Hansen
P. S. Thank you again.

July 8, 1943

Dear Sirs:

I really don't know how to thank you for the swell package you sent me. It was a pleasant surprise and I really appreciate your kindness. I'm feeling fine and like the army life very much. Camp Wheeler here in Georgia is a swell camp, we get good food and plenty of fresh air and exercise. Georgia is a beautiful state and has many beautiful pine forests.
When the moon shines over our camp with all the great pines around it it is a picture never to be forgotten.

Thanking you again for your kindness and thoughtfulness.

Harry Engel.

P. S. Please give my regards to the folks back home.

Sunday morning
Service Men's Committee
Tinley Park, Ill.
Dear Folks:

Your gifts have been following in my wake from Galveston to New Orleans and finally to Panama City, Florida. I have been on a traveling spree and for the time being I will be hanging my cap at the Section Base in this little seacoast town, miles from civilization.

When I heard I was bound for Panama City you can imagine the thoughts that entered my mind. I never heard such a city in Florida. I could visualize tropical heat, mosquitoes and quinine. This is a pleasant surprise and not a bad spot to be stationed.

I am already using your shaving kit and let me tell you it really comes in handy. I appreciate your thoughtfulness and certainly thank you.

This baseball team entered in a local semipro league and I am looking for a chance to get back into hardness. I played one game with them and I found I was not as old as I thought.

Please say hello to all the folks at home and pass on the good word to the gang in the service.

Again I thank you for your kindness, your work is one of the high spots of this war. We can't lose now.

Sincerely,

Ed Ryan

Dear Relatives and Friends:

As it is impossible for me to write to each of you as I intended to, but I just won't be able to because I left the hospital and am with my old out fit again, I am getting along just fine.

I am saying many thanks to all those who made my birthday such a happy one, by sending me so many letters, birthday greetings and lovely gifts. I have received birthday cards for a month. I got them by the hundreds. And thanks again. It makes me feel good to think that my friends back home think of me.

I sure appreciate it very much. I may not be able to write for sometime but I am depending on the Lord for his guiding hand to protect me where ever I may move to. I know the Lord will be with me.

I have also received the Tinley Park Times for which I say many thanks and enjoy reading it very much and I hope I will get it quite often. I am wishing you the best of health and happiness and thanks again for everything.

Please address all my mail to my original outfit before I went to the hospital. Hope to hear from you soon.

I remain, as ever your friend,

Ringling Bros. Circus In Bond Drive

With Robert, Aubrey and Mrs.
Charles Ringling, owners, in harness and running in person the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, which will exhibit in Chicago south of Soldiers Field 12 days,
Afternoon August 34 to Afternoon September 4 the co-operation they initiated with the U. S. Treasury Department and the ODT last winter is clicking daily.

Following the New York and Boston engagements' opening nights when only purchasers of bonds were admitted, the Ringlings have set aside an honor section at afternoon and evening performances in every stand for bond buyers, a procedure planned with Treasury Department representatives in February. At the same time the Ringling family arranged to meet the requirements of the ODT, which then approved the 1943 railroad tour, subject of course, to troop and war supply movements.

To date, the Big Show has moved on schedule for the Ringlings have extended the length of engagements in almost all cities in order to stay off the railway lines as much as possible. Further to relieve the railroads the management has made made many one-day stands into two-day stands.

Performances will be given at 2:15 and 8:15 p.m. with doors open at 1
and 7.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Spirit" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 8.

The Golden Text was, "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God:
thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness" (Psalms 143: 10).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counsellor hath taught him? . . . To whom then will ye liken God? or what likeness will ye compare unto him? . . . God is a Spirit:

Grating noises in your radio may be due to defective tubes. Remove the tubes and have them tested by a serviceman.

Loose tubes may also be the cause of disagreeable noises. So be sure they are firmly in their sockets.

Static is annoying, also injurious to a radio. That's why every outside aerial should have a lightning arrester.

Crackly noises may be caused by aerial or ground wires that are broken or rubbing against trees or metal.

To remove a tube move it from side to side slightly and at the same time pull up on it.

When replacing a tube, the prongs must be lined up to fit the holes in the socket before being pushed into place.

Avoid future trouble in your console radio by placing it an inch or so from the wall.

Tubes, transformers and resistors heat up and may be ruined unless there is free circulation of air.

Remember, reckless handling may spoil reception and performance.

So use care in tuning and operating. Your radio is a delicately adjusted instrument. This is especially true of the push-button control on the radio.

Me! me! don't touch or adjust automatic record changer on phonograph when in motion.

In general, don't play handy man with your radio if it doesn't work well. Take it to a radio service shop.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

Speaking Sports

By Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THERE are certain golf shots that will always live in memory—both of the men who hit them and the spectators who saw them. They are the shots which, more than anything else, helped decide the outcome of many a great tournament.

James S. Kearns, well-known Chicago sports writer, recently recounted a few of those shots—to which he was an eyewitness. Kearns speaking:

"There was Harry Cooper, on the 14th tee at Baltusrol in 1936, on his way to what seemed a certain victory in the National Open as a proper reward for 10 long, stout-hearted years of trying.

"Coop had the biggest gallery or the course that day, and not a personal marshal. He had broken the all-time 54-hole record, and yet the United States Golf association sent him into the final round with nobody to protect him from the crowd. . . . Nobody but Estelle Armour, Tom's wife, and Nellie Cruickshank, Bob's wife, who knew enough of golf to try to give a player the fair chance he deserved.

Heartbreaker

"Well, Cooper stood on the 14th tee with the mob milling around him, and the National Open championship just at his fingertips. He swung away and asked for order. He swung back again. . . . And again the front row of spectators was jammed forward, so close he couldn't swing down at the ball. Finally, on the third try, he hit the ball—into the bunker beside the par 3 green, and right there was opened the door through which Tony Manero slid to take the title.

"There was a Monday morning in Philadelphia in 1939, when it was steaming hot, and when players and watchers alike were dead weary from a week of heat and five days of golf.

Byron Nelson

engaged in a second playoff.

"Off the fourth tee, Wood had belted the better drive, maybe 20 yards. Nelson squared off to his second shot on that long and difficult par 4. He must have been 220 yards from the flag when he drew a bead. He fired the shot the way a Garand rifle might be fired. . . . Dead on line, low and whistling as it went. The ball struck, bounced twice, rolled, fell into the hole. There the 1939 Open championship was settled.

Masters Crown

"There was Nelson at Augusta, playing off with Ben Hogan for the 1942 Masters crown. Three strokes behind at the short sixth, he holed a great deuce to start catching up. Then at par 5 eighth, uphill, he saw Hogan hook his second. The door was open. Byron took a spoon on the uphill lie. He walked to see where the hole was out on the green. He walked back and took aim. Then he knocked the ball five feet from the hole. . . . A low, drawing shot over the brow of the hill, pulling in through the guarded opening to the green. The shot meant an eagle 3, and a lead that was never lost.

"All those. . . . But out of memory one more shines bright across seven years.

"It was the September day when John Fischer of Cincinnati stood on the 36th green in the final match for the amateur championship of the United States in 1936. One down to Jock McLean of Scotland, he was, on Garden City's hurricane-swept acres. . . . One down, and with the muscles of his left leg torn so he could scarcely stand up to a shot because of a fall in a bunker the previous day. One down. . . . And his ball 12 feet from the pin on the par 3 last hole. . . . 12 feet of treacherous, sliding, sloping green. It was hole it—or be runner-up.

"Johnny Fischer sized it up, took a long and careful aim, took a stance. He swung the putter back, and upon the clubhouse roof, eight motion-picture cameras began to grind. Johnny jumped, dropped his putter.

"He smiled in half-apology, half-request and the cameras stopped. He picked up his putter, never bothered to sight the putt, and knocked the ball right in the middle of the hole for a 2 that made him even and let him win on No. 37."

SPORTS SHORTS

Chalky Wright, Negro featherweight, says he doesn't know his correct age. Estimates place it at from 35 to 44.

The American league this season may break the record of 86 extra innings games set by both major leagues in 1916.

Jack Moesch, 16-year-old Long Island prep star, now a utility infielder for Baltimore, is the youngest player in the International league.

Portlight

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE Great Lakes and the Norfolk service ball teams have been picking up most of the publicity as the two outstanding combinations along the war front.

A new challenger has now entered the field with a blast of bugles and a roll of drums.

This challenger thinks it has been overlooked. We refer to the New Cumberland team that meets the star-littered Norfolk bunch in Norfolk over this week-end.

I can break the news to both Norfolk and Great Lakes that New Cumberland's team is no soft touch.

It had won 22 straight games until Washington's Senators beat them 2 to 1 a few days ago on Vernon's homer in the eighth. Still 22 out of 23 isn't too moth-eaten. Over 4,000 tackled a rain to see this game at Harrisburg's Island Park.

New Cumberland's crack pitcher is Tom Hughes of the Phillies. Lynn Myers from the Cardinals and Pat Mullen from the Tigers lead the attack.

These three are not the only high-class players on the team's roster—a team that expects to take Norfolk in tow by Sunday afternoon.

Perhaps it won't, as Norfolk with Rizzuto and many other stars, is on a par with any big league squad.

Great Lakes will also have something to say in a loud voice about any service title.

Navy and Sport

Our navy believes with a big part of our army that sport, handled in the proper way, is something more than slightly important.

It is now well understood that those colleges, for example, who have navy recruits can carry out at least some sort of a football program.

Those colleges taken over by the army, so far as football is concerned, will return to the deep-tangled wildwood, where the whang doodle mourneth.

I have contacted athletic directors at many of these army campus grounds and they all tell me their case is hopeless unless army changes its plan.

"Here's the way it works out at Alabama," a former Rose Bowl star said.

"We have now about 2,500 students enrolled at the university. But they are all, or practically all, in the army. They are under army control, army training, and no longer belong to the university. Many of these want to play football. They believe they can keep up with their work and still find some spare time for a few games with near-by rivals such as Georgia and Georgia Tech. If Alabama was under navy control it would have a pretty fair team with Frank Thomas on hand.

"But under army control, unless army gives its permission for football to go on, there will be no Alabama team this fall. Most of the army men I have talked to—I'd say over 95 per cent—want competitive football to go along as it has at West Point and Annapolis—where they also work 16 hours a day—harder than any army recruits will work at any college.

"I happen to know how keenly the cadets and midshipmen from the Hudson and the Severn want football.

"I'm not speaking for morale on the so-called home front. I'm speaking for those in active service—and those headed in that same direction."

'Ride 'Em Out' Atkinson

One of baseball's most important slogans has always been "run 'em out."

Teddy Atkinson's racing slogan is "ride 'em out." Atkinson is one of the best jockeys riding around New York and the best hustler on the track today.

Too many jockeys stop riding when they see first-place beyond their reach. They overlook the fact that many large chunks of cold and hot cash are sent along for second and third spots.

Atkinson keeps on riding. If he can't make it in front he goes after second money. If he can't get that he keeps shooting for the show.

This, naturally, is the way it should be. It is tough enough to beat 11 or 12 per cent—in fact it's impossible—without having this hostile margin increased several points by riders who ease up or pull up when they see they can't get there in front.

Hagen Wanted to Win

During Walter Hagen's long prime as a winning golfer, the able pro would tell you he had no interest in second or third place—even in a U. S. or British Open.

"Who remembers who finished second or third?" he used to say.

This meant that Hagen would take any kind of gamble to win or lead where others would take no such risk. Hagen often knew that if any of his gambles failed, he would drop from second to fourth or fifth in the money. Perhaps lower.

Farmers Can Raise Spices Now Imported

Western Hemisphere Can Supply All Needs

Every spice, seed and herb that the United States has been accustomed to importing from the Orient can be grown successfully in the Western hemisphere, either in North or South America, believes John A. Sokol, president of a chemical company bearing his name. In an address before the annual Chemurgic conference recently held in Chicago, he divided the plant products into two groups, according to the climatic conditions under which they grow.

First, he said, is the temperate zone, which covers central Europe, the Mediterranean area, Russia, northern India, and northern China. The second zone would comprise the tropics, semi-tropics, and particularly the East Indies close to the equatorial area.

From the temperate zone we have been importing herbs, such as sage, marjoram, thyme, savory, rosemary, sweet basil, oregano, laurel leaves, saffron, red peppers (paprika), and many crude drugs.

From the tropical zone we have been importing peppers, cloves, allspice, ginger, cinnamon, cassia, nutmeg, mace, turmeric, etc.

The items in the first category, namely those grown in the temperate zone, can all be grown in some part of the United States, and the items from the tropical zone could be grown in some of our possessions and also in Central and South America. All of the items under spices for seasoning and condiments could be grown in the Western hemisphere.

That these particular items, he said, could be grown in the United States has been demonstrated.

Other seeds, such as poppy, caraway, dill, coriander, celery, fennel, and anise, have been grown in the United States to some extent. None of these items are available from Europe now and with the present difficulties of obtaining these seeds from India, China and other foreign countries, there are prospects that the growers would find these profitable for the next couple of years at least, Mr. Sokol thinks.

The herbs which have been grown and cultivated here are sage, marjoram, and basil, and an effort is being made to increase their production in this country.

All of the products grown in the United States have been found to be of very good quality and most of them compare very favorably to the products imported from abroad. Also with the American ingenuity to adapt special methods of planting, cultivating and harvesting, much of the low labor cost in foreign countries could be overcome.

Some of the outstanding products which have been grown successfully in the United States are mustard seed, grown in Montana and California, paprika (the sweet grade), grown in California, Louisiana and South Carolina, and sage, marjoram, thyme and basil, grown in practically every state of the United States.

Mr. Sokol continued that he was not giving any figures of the quantities grown, but that he felt assured that with the proper effort and co-operation of the various agencies, American housewives and the food industry can be fully supplied with many of the spice seasonings from products grown in the United States, the tropical possessions, and some of the South American countries.

Farm Notes

More than one-third of the Home Nursing certificates issued by the American Red Cross during the year, ending June 30, were issued to women in rural America.

Glycerine is now banned for use in foods, tobacco, cosmetics, and toilet preparations. Medicinal use has been cut to 60 per cent of normal, all because of war demands.

A Reporter's Bookmarks:

W. L. White's "Queens Die Proudly" (Harcourt-Brace) contains this beautiful wordage: "And the plane—it isn't something that belongs to the Government with a number; it's Old 99, the beautiful NEW Flying Fortress that belongs to you. It's more than your home—it's, well, a kind of a sweetheart. All of you picked her up off the assembly line at the Boeing plant where she was born—a beautiful, smooth, shining, naked thing. Then all of you took her up over the clouds and wrapped that beautiful blue star-spangled gown of the skies around her, which is the way every Fortress ought to be dressed, because they're the Queens of the high skies."

H. Ullstein's "The Rise and Fall of the House of Ullstein" (Simon-Schuster) is a tragic story of the slow death of Germany's greatest publishers via the swastika poison. . . . The history of its downfall has an uncanny way of paralleling some of the events already taking place here. . . . The author reports that he told conservative German dailies to offer stiffer resistance to the rising tide of Nazism. But they, and even chiefs of his own paper, told him not to be so pessimistic about the danger within. . . . They feared that such stories would lose subscribers—so they did nothing, and now they have nothing.

From "Exchange Ship," by Max Hill of the Associated Press (Farar-Rinehart): "Clean people? The Japanese bath provides what probably is the dirtiest way of getting clean in the world. Scores of men, women and children bathe in the same water, which is hot but surely not enough to kill germs. . . . Each wing (of my prison) had a row of five Japanese-type baths, one of them usually out of order. That meant the 180 prisoners had four tubs, and the water wasn't emptied until the last man passed through the line. The native prisoners were first—but there was only one place for the foreigners—last."

H. Allen Smith's book, "Life in a Putty Knife Factory," contains considerable amusement, including: "A man who becomes the writer of a column is much worse off. His brain achieves such a state that no respectable gumma would ever attach itself to it. He becomes a straight-forward paranoiac. He suffers first from headache, tinnitus, palpitation, digestive disturbances, and incapacity for mental exertion. After that come intense egotism, selfishness, conceit, overbearing pride, violent temper, and moroseness. How do I know this? I was a columnist. My own favorite is W. W. Around newspaper offices, where it is fashionable to scoff, he gets very little outspoken applause. Your omniscient, swaggering newspaper man greets his name with a sneer. I never did. I wouldn't sneer even though it made me appear to be sharp as a tack."

"Time of Peace," an exciting tale by Ben Ames Williams (Houghton-Mifflin), contains this gem: "So now you've seen where your ancestors lived," Mark told his son as they came into familiar surroundings. "Don't ever forget that you're more than a New Englander. Out of your eight great-grandparents, two went from Massachusetts to Ohio, two went from Georgia to Mississippi, one lived in California, one in Oregon, one in Minnesota, and one—your mothers great-grandmother—came from Germany. . . . Two of your great-grandparents came from Wales. Your grandparents came from Ohio, Michigan and Minnesota. You've got all the blood strains in you, Tony. You're not a Westerner, nor a Southerner. You're an American."

Secretary Harold Ickes' "The Autobiography of a Curmudgeon" (Reynal & Hitchcock) offers the following in the chapter called Blessed Event: "Mouth-to-ear rumors about a public man are almost without exception so fiercely barbed that most people would hesitate to repeat them out loud if they should be said of a private citizen. The private citizen has easy recourse to the courts—protection under the law. So, too, I grant you, in theory, has the public man, but the more public he is, the greater the probability that should he prove that he didn't actually commit the crime, the publicity that he would get would leave the world convinced that he was in the neighborhood when it occurred. In other words, the people can believe virtually anything concerning a man in public life provided that it is sufficiently unbelievable."

If you are still squawking about rationing, then read "Round Trip to Russia," by Walter Graebner (Lippincott is publisher). . . . Graebner's exciting book says that no civilian in Russia may travel by air or rail or own a car. . . . Eggs, when you can get them, cost $3 each. . . . Newspapers are used for rolling cigarettes and to put between blankets for more warmth. . . . Ninety-five per cent of all food is rationed, and the annual civilian food consumption there is less than the annual civilian waste in the U. S.!

Jumper Set
THIS should be a great success right off—slim, simple jacket topping a youthful, big-pocketed jumper.

Pattern No. 8463 is in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 12 jumper takes 3 yards 39-inch material, short sleeve jacket 1½ yards.

Household Hints
Have you ever tried drying the dishes with twin dish towels? A fresh dry towel in each hand disposes of them in the proverbial twinkling of an eye.

Remove fresh grease stains from wallpaper immediately by holding a clean white blotter over stain and applying a warm iron. Move the blotter as it takes up the grease and use a clean portion to prevent spreading the stain.

For longer service wash cotton garments according to the instructions on the label.

To prevent figs, dates or raisins from clogging the food chopper add a few drops of lemon juice.

If you buy wool material that isn't preshrunk, it's wise to steam-press it to shrink it before cutting out a garment.

Save colored bottles that beverages come in and use them for holding trailing vines, sprays or other greenery. They add a note of color to glass shelves in windows or in flower racks.

Mending a small snag or rip before an article goes into the washing machine may save a larger patch later on.

Plant Patents

Since the "plant law" was passed in 1930, the United States Patent Office has granted 574 patents on new and fixed strains of vegetables, fruits, flowers and other plants. One example is a nasturtium of a superdouble type that flowers with sixty petals instead of the usual five.

Judgment of Odors

That persons vary greatly in their judgment of odors is shown in a survey in which of 3,000 individuals tested for their reactions upon smelling freesias, 19 per cent said that this sweet-scented flower had no odor, 65 per cent said it had a weak or medium odor and 16 per cent said it had a very strong odor, reports Collier's. Of those persons who noticed the fragrance, 86 per cent found it pleasant and 14 per cent unpleasant.

PARATROOPER CHAPLAIN—Officers who minister to the spiritual welfare of American Paratroopers are "sky pilots" indeed. They have qualified in the rigid tests and do not hesitate to accompany their men in the 'chutes. Young men in topnotch physical condition are volunteering for service with the Paratroops. They receive $50 a month over the enlisted men's pay of relative grade. (U. S. Army Air Forces Photo).

TANK GENERAL ON INSPECTION—In his command tank Maj. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, commanding the 11th Armored Division, inspects the 41st Training Regiment of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Since the days of Richard the Lion Hearted Godfrey and Bayard warriors have been pictured reviewing their troops on horseback. In modern warfare we are going back to the custom of the ancients, but instead of the great-wheeled chariot, the generals of today use armored cars and tanks.

KEEPING IN THE SAME FIGHT that cost the life of her Flying Tiger husband, Auxiliary Virginia Brook of 1643 Melvina Avenue, Chicago, will strive to do her part by recruiting more Waacs to send enlisted men from desk jobs to the front. She joined in the Corps on her 21st birthday. She has had basic training at Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., and after attending classes for the recruiting staff, will be sent from that post to a recruiting assignment. Her husband was killed in an airplane crash in Florida, while flying as a captain in the United States Army, after having flown for 13 months with General Chennault's forces in China.
